Celebration is the ranch that solved a narrower lot without giving anything up. The trick is in the garage. Rather than three doors in a row across the front — a configuration that demands a wide parcel — Celebration lines its three bays up in tandem, one behind the other, behind a single street-facing door. Three-car capacity on a lot that would otherwise only hold two. The rest of the home follows the same intelligent restraint: a nearly nineteen-foot Great Room, an optional fireplace, a primary suite with an optional expanded configuration. Celebration celebrates something specific: buildable ingenuity.
