Ashton is a ranch that never apologizes for its footprint.

The great room measures nearly twenty by twenty — a room that hosts book clubs, holidays, and the occasional string quartet with equivalent grace. The primary suite runs twenty feet wall to wall, with a bath that expands into a freestanding tub and an enlarged shower when the mood strikes. The kitchen opens to a breakfast nook, then to a covered patio, then to whatever plans the afternoon has in mind. A formal dining room holds down the front of the home — though it converts, if you'd rather, to a study, a third bedroom, or a private office with its own reference wall.

Downstairs, the walkout basement finishes into a rec room stretching thirty-one feet end to end, with room for two additional bedrooms, an optional junior primary suite, a wet bar, and a fireplace against the far wall. Powder room on request.

The standard three-car garage stretches four feet forward on demand. Ashton, in short, keeps growing to meet the guest list.
