Summit is the two-story that remembers why the living room existed in the first place. Not the great room — which Summit has, sixteen feet across, with an optional indoor-outdoor fireplace. And not the family dining — which Summit also has, tucked beside the kitchen. Summit has a living room. A separate, ceremonial, twelve-by-twelve room at the front of the house. Beside it: a formal dining room, ready for the china that only comes out twice a year. Upstairs, the household retreats. Summit believes some rooms should be worth walking into slowly.

All square footage is approximate. Renderings are artist's conceptions and may vary slightly from the actual home. Homes may be built in reverse of plans shown, depending on site conditions. Minor architectural changes may be made occasionally at the option of the builder. Please contact your Sales Consultant for details.
