St. James is the home that carves the household into rooms of its own. Upstairs, off the primary bedroom, sits a Primary Retreat — a ten-by-ten sitting room dedicated to whatever isn't quite a bedroom and isn't quite a study. Reading. Coffee. The chair by the window that ends up mattering most. Elect the multi-generational suite and the main level gains a second front-of-house residence — its own bedroom, its own living room or study, its own bath, its own quiet door. Between them, the shared house lives well. St. James doesn't scale. It stratifies.
